The Maiden to her Betrayer. BY MRS. F. H. DAY.

Farewell! Farewell-no word of mine, Reproach on thee shall cast : The lips that have been pressed to thine, Shall bless thee to the last. Farewell! Farewell-my breaking heart Shall give no sign of pain : Back to your font, ye tears! nor start-For I have loved in vain.

Farewell! The world before thee lies In colors bright and fair, Though light has faded from my skies, And left but darkness there. Man makes a plaything for an hour, Of woman's holy trust;

Then spurns the crushed and broken flower, And treads it in the dust.

The World approves his manly course, And lures him on to fame ; Yet frowns on woman, fierce and harsh, And covers her with shame. And thou wilt join the cold world's sneers, And set a brand on me. Remember in thy after years,

In early days, I gave to thee A jewel rich and rare, Worth more than pearls from ocean cave, And worthy of thy care. And now, ere we forever part, One boon from thee I crave : Give back the jewel of my heart !

My crime was loving thee.

Fearful Adventure in the Mammoth Cave. THE MALSTROM EXPLORED .- The hero of the exploit thus reported in the Louisville Journal of Sept. 11th, is Wm. C. Prentice, the son of George Give back the love I gave !- [S. F. Hesperian.

D. Prentice: At the supposed end of what has always been considered the longest avenue of the Mammoth Cave, nine miles from its entrance, there is a pit, dark and deep, and terrible, known as the Mælstrom. Tens of thousands have gazed into it with awe whilet Bengal lights were thrown down it to make its fearful depths visible, but none ever had the daring to explore it. The celebrated guide Stephen, who was deemed insensible to fear, was offered six hundred dollars by the proprietor of the Cave if he would descend to the bottom of it, but he shrank from the peril. A few years ago a Tennessee professor, a learned and bold man, resolved to do what no one before him had dared to do, and making his arrangements with great care and precaution, he had himself lowered down by a strong rope a hundred feet, but at that point his courage failed him, and he called alond to be drawn out. No human power could ever have induced him to repeat the appaling experiment.

A couple of weeks ago, however, a young gentleman of Louisville, whose nerves never trembled at mortal peril, being at the Mammoth Cave with Professor Wright, of our city, and others, determined, no matter what the dangers might be, to explore the depths of the Mælstrom. Mr. Proctor, the enterprising proprietor of the Cave, sent to Nashville and procured a long rope of great strength expressly for the purpose. The ropes and necessary timbers were borne by the guides and others to the point of proposed exploration. The arrangements being soon completed, the rope, with a heavy fragment of rock affixed to it, was let down and swung to and fro to dislodge any loose rocks that would be likely to fall at the touch. Several were thus dislodged, and the long-continued reverberations rising up like distant thunder from below, proclaimed the depth of the horrid chasm. Then the young hero of the occasion, with several hats drawn over his head to protect it as far as possible against any masses falling from above, and with a light in his hand and the rope fastened around his body, took his place over the awful pit, and directed the half dozen men who held the end of the rope to let him down into the Cimmerian

We have heard from his own lips an account of his descent. Occasionally masses of earth and rock went whizzing past, hut none struck him. Thirty or forty feet from the top he saw a ledge, from which, as he judged by appearances, two or three avenues led off in different directions. About a hundred feet from the top, a cataract from the side of the pit went rushing down the abyss, and as he descended by the side of the falling water and in the midst of the spray, he felt some apprehension that his light would be extinguished, but his care prevented this. He was landed at the bottom of the pit, a hundred and ninety feet from the top. He found it almost perfectly circular, about eighteen feet in diameter, with a small opening at one point, leading to a fine chamber of no great extent. He found on the floor beautiful specimens of black silex of immense size, vastly larger than were ever discovered in any other part of the Mammoth Cave, and also a multitude of exquisite formations, as pure and white as virgin snow. Making himself heard by his friends with great effort, he at length asked them to pull him partly up, intending to stop on the way and explore a cave that he had observed opening about forty feet above the bottom of the pit. Reaching the mouth of that cave, he swung himself with great exertion into it, and holding the end of the rope in his hand, he incautiously let it go, and it swung out apparently beyond his reach. The situation was a fearful one, and his friends above could do nothing for him. Soon, however, he made a hook of the end of his lamp, and by extending himself as far over the verge as possible without falling, he succeeded in securing the end of the rope. Fastening it to a rock, he followed the avenue 150 or 200 yards to a point where he found it blockaded by an impassable avalanche of rock and earth.

Returning to the mouth of the avenue, he beheld an almost exactly similar mouth of another on the opposite side of the pit, but not being able to swing himself into it, he refustened the rope around his body, suspended himself again over the abyss, and shouted to his friends to raise him to the top. The pull was an exceedingly severe one, and the rope being ill adjusted round his body, gave him the most exeruciating pain. But soon his pain was forgotten in a new and dreadful peril. When he was ninety feet from the mouth of the pit, and a hundred from the bottom, swaying and swinging in mid air, he heard rapid and excited words of horror and alarm above, and soon learned that the rope by which he was upheld had taken fire from the friction of the timber over which it passed. Several moments of awful suspense to those above, in this life, seem to be preparing themselves for and still more awful to him below, ensued. To that smileless eternity to which they look forward, them and him a fatal and instant catastrophe scem- by banishing all gayety from their hearts, and all ed inevitable. But the fire was extinguished with joyousness from their countenances. I meet one a bottle of water belonging to himself, and then such in the street not unfrequently, a person of the party above, though almost exhausted by their intelligence and education, but who gives me, labors, succeeded in drawing him to the top. He and all that passes, such a rayless and chilling was as calm and self-possessed as upon his en- look of recognition, something as if he were one trance into the pit, but all of his companions, over- of Heaven's assessors, come down to "doom" come by fatigue, sank down upon the ground, and every acquaintance he met, that I have sometimes his friend, Professor Wright, from over-exertion begun to sneeze on the spot, and gone home with and excitement, fainted, and remained for a time a violent cold, dating from that instant. I don't

A home without a girl is only half blest : it is an orchard without blossoms, spring without THE UNDERSIGNED has been appointed

[From the New Bedford (Mass.) Mercury, Oct. 26.] Row in a Church in New Bedford.

A few days since we recorded a church difficulty in the Culvinist Baptist church, on Middle street. There was another meeting on Monday evening which greatly exceeded in confusion and all manner of noisy demonstrations the previous one. The origin of the difficulty arose some five or six months since between the pastor, the Rev. Wm. Jackson, and the trustees, a portion of the members charging the reverend gentleman with having appropriated to himself, without their knowledge or consent, certain amounts of funds belonging to the church, which they allege took place about two years since, but have not until now brought the matter up for investigation. A council had previously been held, and it was voted that the charges were without foundation, and that the pastor be retained. The decision, however, was not satisfactory to the opposite side, and last night being a business meeting, the friends and oppo-Cents met in "battle array," and a most tumultuous and exciting meeting was held.

As soon as the members had all convened, one man arose from his seat, rushed to the secretary's table and seized the records, and others proceeded to render him aid, if any were required. The secretary tried to regain them, but was unable to do so. It now seemed as though all Bedlam was let loose. Some were yelling at the top of their voices, some running one way and some another, and there was every indication of a general knock down. The pastor endeavored to get into his possession one of the church records, which so excited Mrs. Nelson, that she seized hold of a cricket, and with up raised hand, and hair standing out like porcupine quills, attempted a violent assault upon him, which so frightened him that he immediately took to his heels and was seen no more. A member, while talking rapidly and incoherently, was upon the point of emphasizing a " big word," when his arm came in contact with a shaded lamp, breaking the glass, and scattering oil upon the "new rig" of the secretary, Mr. Dunlap. Several persons "fastened" to the secretary, while others came to his assistance.

Blows were freely interchanged inside the church, and one woman, a Mrs. Castle, was "slapped" outside. Such expressions as "put him down," "he shall not stay," "stand back," keep hands off me,"" " who are you ! " " to the devil with ye," with no unfrequent cries of " murder! murder!" were heard in all parts of the church. The members were wrought up to the highest pitch of anger and excitement. Neither party would listen for a moment to what the other would say, but each one seemed bound to carry the matter through on his "own hook." The noise attracted the attention of neighbors and passers by. Windows were raised, and "what's he matter?" asked on all sides. Finally it was deemed expedient to call the police. Some of the parties got wind of it, and slowly but reluctantly eft. The police, came, but the "curtain" was falling, and the last act of the drama was over. During the melee, an inoffensive girl was very seriously injured on her sides and abdomen. She stated to her attending physician that she received her bruises in attempting to screen Richard Johnson under a seat from the peltings of four burly, full-sized pugilists, one of whom had got him, as the " fancy" would have it, in "chancery." While she was doing this she was pitched into by the wife of Wm. Bush and her four enraged daughters.

One of the persons most severely pummelled was James Rich. The minister, it appears by the statement of the girl, was either frightened, or his Christian graces so much abounded that he ran from the field of battle.

The women screamed, shouted, stamped and gave vent to their feelings in such frantic yells as to induce our reporter to ask a member if any one of the sisters had fainted, to which a meek, piouslooking brother quietly said, " No, there is too much devil in them to faint."

Morphy or Morrissey.

Our columns announce the feats of two American victors-the one of mind and the other of musele. Both are typical of tendencies which exist among our population, and which are probably on the increase. Which class shall be fostered by our press and by our men of leisure and influence So far as we can find time from necessary pursuits to indulge in recreation, shall it be of that nature which is at this moment astonishing the most cultivated circles of Europe with a new sense of our intellectual capacities; or shall it be akin to that exhibition over the Canadian line, of which the report raises emotions of disgust or delight in exact proportion as it reaches minds refined or brutalized! In other words, shall we assimilate in our amusements to the divine part of our nature, or the merely animal ? These questions will be found to suggest the solution fairly enough. It is a good thing, doubtless, for a man to be able to defend himself physically-and there is considerable need of it, too, where pugilism is cultivated. but it may be bought at a price too great. Certainly, a man in most parts of the country could hardly afford to run the risk of having his sons grow up blackguards, for the sake of keeping himself in " prime condition" against an emergency which is quite as rare as a fatal stroke of lightning. It is well enough also to talk about the " love of fair play " diffused by the brutalities of the ring. may be something if it, though it sounds more like one of those specious pretences which have been enlisted in the service of every vice knewn to human unture. In its best light, it assumes that a bodily fight is an appropriate way of settling difficulties-a detestable idea under a government of laws, but one which makes far more in favor of dueling than of manual pounding, because the conditions of success in the former are either more equal by nature, or are more equally open to acquisition. If it be said that a clean bullet-hole is the end of a combatant, while a sparring engagement only leaves him battered, bruised and maimed, somewhat out of God's image, but still preserved to his family-we should want to think some time before we let this consideration decide the question. It would still remain to reflect, what sort of a man would be likely to be thus preserved to society; and also, whether the summary contingencies of the duel would not best operate to prevent personal difficulties, or to settle them amicably. In fact, no man wants any argument upon a subject which bears the marks of condemnation all over it. The miserable wretches that generally engage in the contests of the ring, the interests attending them which reaches its climax only in the lowest haunts of vice, the ci gusting phraseology with which they corrupt young minds, the laws of our country which require their suppression-these fix a stigma which no sophistry can avert, nor any apology lighten. It only remains for those who stand at the avenues of public influence to exer themselves discreetly and faithfully, and we shall see this offshoot of foreign barbarism ultimately crushed out of our society .- [Boston Journal Nov. 5.
